Miss Josephine Cochran and Miss Anne Rice and Marie Berengo were left business Sunday afternoon when they embarked with a freight steamer at the apartment of Miss Cochran at 11 Charles Ave. in honor of Miss Betty Harding, who will be married in June.

Family gifts from about twenty-five guests were received by Miss Harding.

The gifts were placed under a large umbrella covered of nylon tulle adorned with sequins. This was opened to reveal the prettily wrapped presents.

The table was lavishly with a centerpiece of flowers, candles, and many names of the friends shared other portions of the apartment.

The other scheme was white and yellow and red and pink carried out the same color scheme.

Miss Harding wore a white and navy fringed dress and was presented with a white garlands corsage. Her mother, Mrs. Fred Harding, was powered in a navy capote thick and a pink gown. The guest consisted in her.

CORRECT FARMING METHOD

The above photo shows a properly planned water disposal area in a cultivated field. S. D. Bennett, Supervisor of the Water Disposal, Cotton County, established four water disposal areas last fall, located to save location and saving and establishing of water disposal areas must be considered before fields are tilled.

Soil Conservation Service Technicians of Hancock County Soil Conservation District assisted Bennett in selecting and laying out the disposal areas. Bennett points out that the proper disposal areas last fall, located to save location and saving and establishing of water disposal areas must be considered before fields are tilled.

INCORRECT FARMING METHOD

Aerial view showing gullies developing in a natural depression in cultivated fields planted in straight rows. This is what happens to fresh plowed cultivated fields after a big rain such as the one we recently had.

The farmer is losing all of his valuable top soil and if erosion continues unabated, the farmer will lose this entire field to gullies within a few years. The soil Conservation Service Technicians will help such farmers to control erosion on their farms. They will let the SCS know of their needs and cooperate with the Hancock County Soil Conservation District.

Richard Wilson, USN, Seattle, Wash., was a recent guest of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carter. He came with them from Jacksonville, Fla., and spent about a week in Bay St. Louis.

Mrs. Clem Penrose entertained at cards at her home on Wednesday afternoon.

approach to solving the problems of agriculture and, in turn, the nation's economy.

In 1955, Mississippi had three agricultural demonstrators who were doing something that later became known as cotton picking. These were W. M. Hensley of Hattiesburg, Cal. W. R. Henry of Gulfport and Cal. J. R. Adge of Gulfport.

Dr. Kiefer attended a meeting at A. & M. College in the fall of 1955. From demonstration work to help rural areas in the United States began in September 1955, when T. M. Campbell was appointed supervisor of Negro demonstration work to be conducted in Hattiesburg, Mississippi, and in Mobile and Wetumpka, Alabama.

An event comparable in national importance to the demonstration in 1955 on the part of the three men was the Federal government, through Dr. Kiefer, first recruited a small group of men.

The men were a group of men organized by W. H. "Doc" Clark, State Director of the United States Department of Agriculture, who were to be sent to the United States to help rural areas in the United States.
